Synopsis

An echo is your own sound coming back for you. What happens when your old grief finds you?

A cave, pitch-black. MARY enters, and speaks to the audience. It's pitch-black, but she has a flashlight.

MARY

Beautiful, isn't it? This silence. But that's what's great about caves. (she listens) Echo!

MARY'S ECHO

Echo!

MARY

Hello there!

MARY'S ECHO

Hello there!

MARY

My son was a spelunker. Chris. His last cave, this one, had a huge close-call. One of the rocks gave out from under him, he almost fell three hundred feet. (looks back for ALEX) Alex! Come on!

MARY'S ECHO

Come on!

MARY

See, it's an Echo. (calls out) Chris?

MARY'S ECHO

Chris?

ALEX enters.

ALEX

Mom-

MARY

I think he's close.

ALEX

(pause) How about we head back up.

MARY

We just started.

ALEX

We've gone half a mile.

MARY

That leaves two-and-a-half left.

ALEX

I'm not walking three miles in the dark.

MARY

This is cave day, Alex.

ALEX

It's been three years.

MARY

Every cave day we walk three miles in the dark-

ALEX

We're not going to find him

MARY

Your brother explored three hundred caves-

ALEX

Mom-

MARY

A man who explored three hundred caves doesn't slip.

ALEX

Mom-

MARY

Don't give up on him, Al.

ALEX

I'm not-

MARY

Don't forget him.

ALEX

(pause) I haven't.

MARY

Then we have two and a half miles to go.

ALEX

I'm just saying that the rocks are slippery and I'm gonna crack my skull open.

MARY

Don't say that.

ALEX

Call-out. He's experienced, so after three years of wandering, he'll be within earshot. Wait for a response. If you hear one, then we'll go on. But if not, then come back up. Alright?

MARY

(calls out)

Chris?

MARY'S ECHO

Chris?

ALEX

Mom! Alright?
